Mitsuki Dazai makes a rare Idaho appearance at two concerts—When East Meets West. From her classical roots in Japan where she studied traditional and contemporary koto music, Mitsuki has emerged with her own unique and diverse sound. Her performances often incorporate western, pop, and improvisational elements, challenging the many voices of the koto.

Composer, guitarist Craig J. Green spent the last 20 years doing extensive travels throughout the United States, Mexico, Canada, Europe, Asia and North Africa as a leader, backup musician and student of sound. With collaboration and improvisation as the focus, he continues to work with visual artists, dancers and other musicians from around the world.
